

SUNDAY AT THE CHURCHES

Services and Sermons at the First Presbyterian Church and Roman Catholic Cathedral.

The Rev. T. V. Moore Warns All Sinners to Prepare for the Day of Judgment.

Rev. Father Palladino Gives Some Sensible Advice on the Subject, "Prudence and Charity."

An able and interesting sermon was preached last evening at the First Presbyterian church by the pastor, Rev. T. V. Moore. The text was taken from Acts 17, 30-31: "He hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world by righteousness by the man whom he hath ordained."

Among other things, Mr. Moore said: "One of the most solemn facts in our knowledge is that God hath appointed a day by which he will judge the world in righteousness. The text suggests three points, the day, the judgment and judge. We must not understand the day as a period of twenty-four hours. It simply means that there is a definite time fixed by God when he will call the whole inhabited world into judgment. The world is not to go on till life is swallowed up by death and man shall have become an extinct race. Science sometimes draws such pictures and they might come if God would permit it. When it has finished its destiny God will bring the human race to a finish. The time will also come when other planets may catch the shining of our judgment. I will not picture the scenes of that day. The fullest account of it in the scriptures is brief and simple. Let us remember that the object of this description is to impress the thought of its moral significance. It will be no show day for us. The significance of that day will swallow up all thoughts. The spectacle of a great battle is magnificent on canvas or from a distant point of view, but what is the significance to the soldiers who may any minute be laid dead. On that day of judgment it will be sin that will appal the soul. The judgment will be a time of adjustment between man and man. Such an adjustment is necessary to vindicate God's system of government over this world. Judgment is a necessity to the moral growth of the universe. 'Every one shall give an account of himself to God' is the way the scriptures put it. We ought not to think of the day of judgment as though it were an inquisition or prosecution. The object of the judgment will be the manifestation of truth. Nothing will be perverted on the one hand and nothing left out on the other. There will be no partiality in either side. Taking our lives in their entirety the examination will be minute. Can we render a satisfactory account even of the last week in its entirety? On that day, Christ need not open his mouth but point to the word of truth. We shall be confronted by no abstract law, but the incarnation in human form of perfect righteousness. Christ was tried in all points as we are. When we stand there before him we will be confronted by the ineffable holiness of God, not by a man. This judge we must meet; this account we must render. There will be no escape for the account is all written in God's book and we cannot hide ourselves."

At the Cathedral.

At the Catholic Cathedral last evening the spacious edifice was filled with a large congregation to attend the beautiful and impressive vespers services. The choir singing, always an entertaining feature of Catholic services, was very good.

The Rev. Father Palladino conducted the services. The subject of his short but pointed sermon was "Prudence and Charity," in which he depicted the cunning and craft of the man of to-day whose only idea of prudence is to get the best of his fellow man in some business transaction. This practice of worldly prudence has reached such a stage that a man can rarely place any dependence in anyone, even his best friend. Such being the state of affairs charitable deeds are neglected. Man's idea of prudence is mistaken. Jesus Christ was at all times prudent and he set the example for all to follow. The prudence of God is striving to follow as the worldly prudence is disorder and therefore a fault. This life can only last a little while before the life that shall continue forever, and it therefore behooves all good Christians to be prudent as taught by the saviour, and the world will be better for it and better fit to receive the everlasting glory that awaits them after this life is ended.

THE IRON MOUNTAIN MINE

Looking Better Than Ever—A Meeting to Be Held To-Day.

Allen McDonnell, superintendent of the Iron Mountain mine, is in the city, and reports that there is more ore in sight at present than was ever exposed since ore was discovered. The mine has four distinct veins, each carrying large quantities of shipping and concentrating ore. At present twenty men are employed and all work is confined to tunnel No. 4. This is 300 feet long and at its face a winze fifty feet deep has been sunk. A large station twenty feet high has been cut out in the tunnel and a hoist placed in position. To-day Mr. McDonnell says sinking will begin on the winze and will be put down 300 feet. This work will be continued during the winter when the river will be so frozen as to prevent ore shipping. There is about six feet of snow on Iron Mountain, Mr. McDonnell says, and the ore is below the level of several miles by sleighs. Between five and six thousand sacks of ore, running from 90 to 100 ounces per ton, are piled up awaiting shipment. The river is partly frozen at present, but a thaw is expected soon, when this ore will be sent to Helena. Mr. McDonnell thinks it will be the last shipment of the season. It is very probable that next spring a concentrator will be erected near the mine. The railroad will run within two miles of the mine when extended out that way, and the company promises to have it there next summer.

The Iron Mountain company will hold a business meeting to-day. On the 21st inst., the date of the regular monthly meeting, the only stockholder who put in appearance was Mr. Hall.

CAUGHT ON THE CORNERS.

"Did you ever notice," remarked a man who had just left a church last evening, "that just when the preacher begins to talk, some one will start coughing; but that's not the worst part of it. The first cougher has hardly finished his cough when some one else bobs up with a cough and in a very few minutes it becomes epidemic and just enough coughing continues during the sermon to greatly interfere with the sound to all except those who occupy the front seats. I never could understand this strange and disagreeable thing, but if you will notice, you will find that nearly all the time in a church will cough and continue coughing while the preacher is lecturing. I remember one time in San Jose this thing happened, and the pastor, realizing that what he was saying did not reach the ears of half his congregation, paused in the middle of his sermon, and remained silent for several minutes until everything was so quiet that the drop of a pin could be heard. Finally he said that when the coughing would cease he would proceed. The effect was that no more coughing was heard during the rest of the lecture. This just illustrates that the coughing practice is all a habit, and a very disagreeable one. Of course there are instances where a person may have a bad cold, but such persons should remain away until they are cured of it."

"You boast that you have the only metropolitan city in Montana," said a Butte man yesterday, addressing a Helena man. "Why, yes," continued the Butte man, "we have telegraph, electric light and telephone wires so thick on our main street that when it rains people stand under them to keep from getting drenched. Before they were put up, the west side of Main street always received the sunshine, but now you can walk from the Lizzie block up to the postoffice and never see the sun. But that isn't all. It is contemplated to introduce an electric motor system. Then we will have more overhead wires on both sides of the street. At the present time there are no less than 185 wires running nearly the entire length of one side of Main street and the poles of three companies. Our liberal city council interposes no objection to this, notwithstanding that the firemen protest against it as well as many of our prominent citizens."

"Then we have another thing in Butte that you haven't got, and that is a large and well selected stock of smaller smoke, which at this time of the year is beginning to assert its right to circulate around the city. In the stores, opera houses, ball rooms and any place it cares to go, where it can be nuisance. Why, last Thursday night at the firemen's ball the smoke was so thick in the ball room that a fellow could not encircle his arms around his partner's waist. A committee of five men called on Lee Mantle to ask him to take steps to prevent a recurrence of this nuisance, and he promised that he would at once call a meeting of the board of trade. The smaller smoke nuisance last year brought out many ideas as to how the smoke could be disposed of, but none of the schemes proved successful as the board of trade meeting."

Skating at the Broadwater.

The skating pond near the Hotel Broadwater will be a very popular resort during the winter, and many visit it now, but there is considerable complaint as to the ice. Instead of being smooth and glossy, as it should and could be made, it is very rough and not much better than skating on the sidewalks of Main street. A number of young men have called at this office requesting that the attention of the managers be called to the condition of the ice. If kept smooth they propose organizing a club and have a guaranteed number who will patronize the pond regularly, that it may be made an object to keep the ice in good condition. Yesterday a very large number of people went ice skating, and the exhilarating sport is becoming very popular.

THE MINES OF MAIDEN.

Description of One of the Most Remarkable Mineral Sections of Montana.

A Vast Area in Which Many Rich Discoveries Have Been Made.

Ores Valuable in Both the Character and Quantities of Metal They Carry—Water in Plenty.

Almost every mining camp in Montana has its great leading mine which attracts the attention of the outside world. Marysville has its Drum Lumber, Castle its Cumberland, Paradise its Iron Mountain, Phillipsburg its Granite Mountain, and Maiden has its Spotted Horse.

In years past the Maginnis was the leading mine of Maiden, but the Spotted Horse, after its ups and downs, incident to the effects of rich and poor streaks found in all mines, has been for months supplying two mills with ores rich enough to enable them to turn out such results in bullion as to give this mine a place in the first rank of the world's bonanzas. But the Spotted Horse must look well to its laurels, for there are other mines at Maiden which will tread close upon its heels.

But in some respects Maiden is one of the most remarkable mining camps in the world. Maiden is in the midst of and claims for its mineral kingdom all the peaks and ridges and foot hills of the Judith mountains; for all of them are literally covered with vast quantities of good float and rich ore. Hundreds and hundreds of mining claims have already been opened in all these mountains, and new discoveries are the order of the day. Many of these discoveries have been so developed as to show they contain vast quantities of good ore.

The Judith mountains must have been, in now and must continue to be, the paradise of prospectors. In many places he saw large bodies of iron ore so charged with gold as to make them very desirable. He also found manganese ores attractive in color and rich enough in precious metals to render them very valuable for fluxing refractory ores. And all the valleys and gulches and mountain slopes were strewn with fragments, great and small, rich in gold and silver. So abundant is the float from the veins of these mountains that it will be gathered up with great profit at no distant day.

So numerous and varied were the float ores as to bewilder the prospector in tracing them up to the leads from which they came. But hundreds of those leads have been discovered and opened and represented from year to year to hold them till such time as a railroad will give cheap transportation and make their ores valuable.

This mining region is very large, covering the entire group known as the Judith mountains. For miles in every direction from Maiden—to the west, six miles west, to Deer creek north, to Cone butte and east to Fort Maginnis. In all this vast area is every valley on every mountain side, from base to summit, and every foot-hill, we find shaft and tunnel in upon vein of ore, which everywhere intersect these mountains.

There are three classes of veins in these mountains. We also find fine lead, iron, limestone and porphyry or igneous rocks, granite veins cutting the highest ridges and the lowest valleys, and blanket veins lying between the rock strata.

So far the contact veins have been most developed and have shown vast quantities of ores in deposits somewhat irregular as might be expected. The crevice veins have not appeared so large and have not been so much worked. Of the blanket veins but little is as yet known; those seen had not been much developed.

The ores of this mining region are very variable in both the characters and quantities of the metals they carry. We find quartz carrying gold and silver, good milling ore. We also find fine lead, iron, limestone, rich in gold, sometimes silver, galena and carbonate of lead, copper pyrites and carbonates of copper, carrying silver and gold are abundant. There are also various ores of iron and manganese, rich in the precious metals. These lead, iron and manganese ores will be valuable as fluxing ores for those more refractory. Limestone is found in all parts of this region; so there will be no lack of fluxes and fluxing ores for the furnaces, which shall pour out the precious bullion contained in the contact veins.

Placers have been discovered and worked with greater or less success in various gulches of the Judith mountains. Water is an absolute necessity in all mining operations, gulches out in fountains on every mountain side and flows in never-failing streams down every ravine and valley to supply the waters of Judith river and Dog, Arica, Box Elder and McDonnell creeks. These fountains and streams were full and flowing in the summer and fall of 1889, the driest season ever known to the oldest pioneers.

Forests of pine, fir and spruce cover all these mountains and will furnish timber in abundance for all mining purposes, and fuel for the furnaces. But nature has laid up in mineral coal stores of fuel all around Maiden far in excess of that in all the forests of the state, for the supply of all the future wants of domestic and mining purposes. The supply will be ample for this and future generations. Coal beds have been discovered and opened up around the Judith mountains, six miles north, near Fort Maginnis, at the base of Moccasin mountains and on the tributaries of the Judith river. So there will be no lack of fuel convenient to the mining region. And it may be that these veins of coal so extended into the mountains, they have been coked into anthracite ready for the smelter's furnace.

There are two stamp mills at Maiden now running on the ores of the Spotted Horse. These mills have concentrators for condensing and saving the rich tailings for the smelter. And it may be that large additions, as I am told, to the bullion produced by the mills.

A railroad is all that Maiden needs to make it one of the most extensive and productive mining camps in the state.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Spider and Fly" To-night—Several Fine Attractions Coming.

The engagement of the Hyers sisters was concluded on Saturday night to a crowded house. The programme was rendered in a very pleasing manner to a delighted audience. Several new songs introduced were received with uproarious applause. The Hyers sisters and company fully deserve the success of their engagement in this city.

Spider and Fly.

The above spectacular attraction will be presented at the opera house this and to-morrow evenings. The sale of seats indicates a packed house for the first performance. An exchange speaks of it as follows: "It is not a medley begged, borrowed or stolen from the popular opera of the day, but every bar of it has been written especially for the 'Spider and Fly.' It has more than a dozen airs which are bright and catchy, but the ones which are likely to become lasting favorites are 'A Fairy Story,' a duet sung by Miss Thomas and Bessie Cleveland; 'A Cash Girl,' chorus, with a quick cash, cash ending; a clever topical song, 'It Might Be Worse,' and a duet by Pauline Markham and Bessie Cleveland titled 'That's Her Idea.' A gymnasium chorus and a railroad chorus also promise to be musical novelties."

The Grismer-Davies Company.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Joseph Grismer and Miss Phoebe Davies and an excellent company will begin an engagement of four nights at the opera house. The Tigress will be the opening attraction. Concerning it the San Francisco Report says: "The 'Tigress' received the attention of a large and critical audience. The present acting version follows the original very closely. Mr. Grismer personates, with a strong and fairly sustained accent, the Italian adventurer, whom he makes an impressive character, very like the polishedascal described in the book. Miss Phoebe Davies, as the deceived and abandoned flower girl of the prologue and the governess of the play, has a role in which her best qualities find scope, and in some of the scenes with Stella shows remarkable power and intensity. Miss Isabelle Archer, who plays the 'Tigress,' comes near in appearance and manner to the 'willow blonde' of the novel."

McKee Banking Rankin Coming.

This famous actor will be seen in a new play, the "Runaway Wife," at Ming's opera house, on next Monday and Thursday evenings. Miss Nellie Hoyt, the handsome and accomplished leading lady, and a fine company will assist Mr. Rankin in the rendition of the play. Large audiences will doubtless be present on both evenings.

BULL AND BEAR UNION.

A Love Match Arranged Between a Russian Duke and an English Princess.

London is amazed and expectant at the statement that the much betrothed Grand Duke Nicholas, czarowitz of Russia, is a successful suitor for the hand of Princess Maud of Wales; that the engagement will be formally announced almost immediately, and most singular of all, in view of the recent reports of the czarowitz's preference for Princess Margaret of Prussia, that he is actually up to his eyes in love with the young lady. To what extent this report is worthy of credence cannot, of course, be determined at this time, but it is permissible to say that no more desirable alliance for either party could be made. However it may be regarded in Russia, it would be certain of popular approval in London. When it was announced and generally believed in England that the czarowitz was about to become the husband of Princess Margaret of Prussia, Germans were almost unanimous in denying the report, and evidenced marked eagerness in coupling the name of the heir to the Russian throne with Princess Helena of Montenegro, though with no apparent justification and manifestly to resent the openly displayed partialities to a royal marriage in this case. If it be true that Russia and England are again to be allied by ties of marriage it will afford a degree of gratification to every Russian to be able to boast of being prominently in the clause of the report crediting the czarowitz with regarding Princess Maud with feelings of affection, a sentiment rarely expressed by either of the contracting parties to a royal marriage in these days, at least before the ceremony. Indeed it is asserted that the marriage of the prince of Wales to Princess Alexandra of Denmark was the last love match recorded in the hymenal annals of royalty.

CLAIMED HER LOST SON.

A Chicago Mother Finds Her Lost Boy With a Kind Louisville Doctor.

About a year ago a little, golden-haired boy, about ten years old, was arrested and taken before Chief of Police Wood, of Louisville, Ky., charged with vagrancy. He gave his name as Michael Mankosky, and said he had run away from his home in Chicago. No information concerning the little fellow could be had from the city, however, so the boy remained about the streets of Louisville until he was adopted by Dr. Brzozowski, a physician. The boy was bright, and soon gained a hold on the hearts of his foster parents. The other morning a carriage drove up in front of the doctor's residence on Jackson street and a handsomely dressed woman got out and rang the bell. Michael Mankosky ran to open the door and told into his mother's arms. The doctor was sent for and the mother told him that she had come to claim her boy. Dr. Brzozowski gave him up with great reluctance and the very next day he was allowed to remain with his adopted father, but Mrs. Mankosky would not consent. The Mankoskys are said to be well-to-do people. The boy had disappeared about a year ago and no trace of him could be had.
